In Strong Support of LD 1807, “An Act to Expand Nursing Education Programs”

Tuesday, February 22, 2022

Senator Rafferty, Representative Brennan and distinguished members of the Joint Standing Committee on Education and Cultural Affairs, I am Dr. Mark Foure, President of Pen Bay Medical Center and Waldo County General Hospital, and I am here today to testify in strong support of LD 1807, “An Act to Expand Nursing Education Programs.”

MaineHealth is a non-profit health care system that provides the full continuum of health care services to the residents of eleven counties in Maine and one in New Hampshire through its nine local health systems. In addition to serving as the President of two of these local health systems, I am also proud to serve as a trustee on the Maine Community College System Board of Trustees.

The legislation before you today will allow the Community College System to double its nursing education capacity at a time when the need has never been greater. We sincerely thank Sen. Mattie Daughtry for bringing this bill forward and Governor Mills for including the funding in her proposed Supplemental Budget.

The COVID-19 pandemic has put tremendous pressure on every aspect of our health care system and has exacerbated a longstanding workforce crisis. I have been in health care my entire career and I can say with certainty that I have never seen anything like this.

We’ve long known that we were heading towards a retirement cliff, and that Maine would experience the national shortage of health care workers more acutely due to our rapidly aging population. And the pandemic has only exacerbated and accelerated this impending shortage.

Health care systems continue to grapple with the increased demand for services as our patients voluntarily put off care during the pandemic, or providers, like MaineHealth, have been forced to cancel and delay procedures due to COVID. In the period between November and January, Maine Medical Center delayed 2,138 cases and at Coastal Healthcare Alliance, we’ve had to delay over 200 – or almost 30% of our inpatient cases at Pen Bay Medical Center. That pent-up demand means that we’re now seeing more patients and more acutely ill patients than we ever have before. Our inpatient census has been at capacity nearly every day, a situation that rarely occurred before the pandemic.

MaineHealth has responded by adding almost 1,000 positions to accommodate the increased volume, but it hasn't been enough. Out of approximately 6,000 nursing positions at MaineHealth, over 860 are vacant – despite hiring over 900 external RNs last year (a 30% increase from the previous year).

In addition to investing over $39 million last year to retain our current nurses, MaineHealth has also made significant investments in our recruitment efforts and to help “grow our own” in an effort to aggressively address this shortage. In fact, MaineHealth has partnered with all 15 nursing programs in the state to help our own employees grow in their careers. We have done so by supporting entry level employees' enrollments in nursing programs and the progressive development of our nurses who wish to advance their careers by pursuing master's or doctoral degrees. We have also engaged in a variety of creative approaches with our academic partners in which we provide clinical instructors from among our expert RN staff and preserve their salaries and benefits at our own costs to allow for expanded enrollment capacity.

Despite this, over 1,500 individuals remain on the waitlist to enroll in the Maine Community College System's nursing programs. The Maine Hospital Association estimates that hospitals are currently recruiting for 1,500 to 2,000 nurses. Hospitals and the state's nursing programs have made inroads in addressing the shortage of nurses and the growing waitlist, but legislative action is needed if we're going to be successful. The demand for the nursing programs is clear, and thousands of good-paying, high quality nursing careers are waiting to be filled. This bill takes a big step towards starting to meet that need.

Thank you and I would be happy to answer any questions you may have.
